PLAINTIFFS' REPLY MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS'
EMERGENCY MOTION TO RESET SCHEDULING DATES PERTAINING TO CLASS CERTIFICATION

Defendants were required on October 25, 2004 to serve plaintiffs with their opposition papers – this they did not do. As plaintiffs plowed through the 40 binders and 100 pages of opposition briefs,¹ plaintiffs discovered that the opposition papers defendants filed were incomplete, missing exhibits, illegible or on corrupted disks.² In addition, volumes of critical material relied upon by defendants' experts were not produced and for a while defendants refused to turn it over. Thus, it was not until Friday, November 12, 2004, with depositions of experts to commence the following Monday, November 15, 2004, that defendants produced some of this critical reliance data. One weekend is not sufficient time to analyze this data sufficient to use it in a meaningful fashion at the depositions. Defendants' tardiness has vastly reduced the time set in the briefing schedule for plaintiffs to analyze defendants' opposition and respond to it.³

¹ Defendants did not in their opposition address their seeking additional pages under the guise of needing to address "defendant specific arguments" while then using those pages to address global issues such as choice of law. See Plaintiffs' Emergency Motion To Reset Various Dates Pertaining To Class Certification ("Reset Motion") at note 1.

² Berman Decl., ¶ 6, filed with motion.

Plaintiffs' experts need to analyze the data and subsequently plaintiffs' lawyers need to incorporate that analysis into deposition questions, the reply brief and expert declarations.⁴ In their brief in opposition to Plaintiffs' emergency motion, defendants' ignore much of their own conduct, for example their failure to originally produce exhibits and documents cited in expert reports. They have no excuse why exhibits were illegible or missing or their disks corrupted. Instead, they claim that as to expert reliance materials, no production was required by agreement of the parties. This is patently false as proven by Exhibit C to the Edwards Declaration which is the lynchpin of their opposition. It states as follows:

With respect to paragraphs 1 and 2, you have represented that all documents and information relied upon by your experts are identified in their declarations, and you have agreed to provide us with copies to the extent that we are having difficulty obtaining them on our own. With respect to paragraph 3, you have represented that your experts have not interviewed any witnesses, and you view any workpapers (e.g., documents that would show the calculations underlying a chart) as drafts that do not have to be produced. With respect to paragraph 4, you have represented that all reference works or treatises relied on by your experts have been identified in their declarations, except for standard references that are not being used to support any specific point.

Thus, contrary to defendants' argument, plaintiffs identified all data that Dr. Hartman relied on and agreed to provide any data defendants' could not obtain on their own. The Hartman charts defendants point to, where they claim plaintiffs' reliance data was not turned over, is thus a misdirection. The data underlying the charts was identified – it was derived from each defendant’s own database supplied to us on disks produced by defendants. Defendants were obviously able to retrieve their own sales data. Here, defendants did not disclose the reliance data and when they did it was initially illegible or corrupted. Further, as pointed out in the Sobol Affidavit (¶¶ 7-9) some of the data is not available and can only be obtained from a third party after licensing issues are resolved. Thus, Defendants claim that Dr. Hartman’s production is comparable and/or justifies their conduct is wrong. Defendants had the Hartman data from the get go. There is nothing in the course of dealing that justifies defendants’ failure to produce key reliance materials and the Edwards’ letter evidences that the opposite was to occur.

The simple fact is that plaintiffs have been prejudiced by the combination of (1) defendants’ failure to answer interrogatories that would have flushed out fact issues prior to briefing; (2) defendants’ filing of voluminous materials, some of which were filed pursuant to a false claim that they were to be part of “individual fact specific responses”; (3) the failure of defendants to serve exhibits and data on October 25, 2004 as required by Court order; and (4) the failure to turn over critical expert reliance data in a timely fashion.

Defendants point to no prejudice they will suffer if the motion is granted. Important briefing like the class-related papers should not be subjected to the unfairness that flows from defendants’ conduct which is in violation of court scheduling orders and the parties’ own agreements.
